TTS Announces K-12 IT Analysis Services for a New Jersey School District

TTS has been selected by the Stafford School District in New Jersey to provide detailed IT operations analysis to increase efficiency and reduce costs. Faced with acute budget cuts in NJ, schools across the state are forced to lay off teachers and employees, reduce busing, cut back on extracurricular and cultural courses, and drop sports teams. TTS offers a unique value by helping schools focus on their core abilities by lowering IT spending and increasing efficiency.

Over the past decade, schools have adopted complex and expensive IT systems. Facing acute budget cuts, schools find the growing need to streamline their IT spending while maintaining current levels of operational efficiency.

TTS is uniquely positioned to understand IT complexities within a K-12 environment. TTS offers comprehensive IT solutions, including a student information system called Monitor. TTS has adopted a holistic approach to address IT challenges. TTS will integrate solutions, identify redundant processes, and offer cost solutions. TTS will help eliminate some critical IT drawbacks, such as adding overhead and investing in unnecessary infrastructure or hardware. By identifying interdependencies and segmenting each IT transaction, TTS offers significant cost savings and operational improvements.

TTS expects to use this value proposition in schools across the US, especially in states with acute K-12 budget cuts. In addition, TTS expects to take over IT departments of K-12 schools to provide optimal operational efficiency and cost savings.
